Madame Secretary, here is what we have found thus far in terms of Republican voices encouraging the pastor to reconsider.

Denounced the Koran Burning:

Sen. McCain on Twitter:

"Pastor Jones' threats to burn the Koran will put American service men/women in danger - for their sake please don't do it!"

(<http://twitter.com/SenJohnMcCain>)

Sarah Palin on Twitter and Facebook: "Koran Burning Is Insensitive, Unnecessary; Pastor Jones, Please Stand Down"

Rep. Boehner on ABC News: "just because you have a right to do something in America does not mean it is the right thing to do.... We're a nation of religious freedom. We're also a nation of tolerance. And I think in the name of tolerance, people ought to really think about the kind of actions they're taking... I just think that it's not wise to do this in the face of what our country really represents," said Boehner.

Gov. Barbour via ABC News: "'I do not think well of the idea of burning anybody's Koran, or Bible, Book of Mormon or anything else. ... I don't think there's any excuse for it,"

Gov. Pawlenty via Minnesota Public Radio Report: "Gov. Tim Pawlenty says he doesn't think burning the Quran is a good idea, but he's not specifically calling on a Florida pastor to cancel a planned weekend protest. The Republican governor, who is viewed as a likely presidential candidate in 2012, commented on the Quran controversy today at an airport news conference before leaving on an Asian trade mission. Pawlenty said that people have a legal right to burn books, but that doesn't mean it's wise. He stopped short of saying the burning shouldn't go forward."

Former Gov. Romney via Politico: "Burning the Quran is wrong on every level," the former Massachusetts governor said in a statement to POLITICO. "It puts troops in danger and it violates a founding principle of our Republic."
